

Strike on June, 5th

I would like to strike, but ...

How can I afford to lose one day on my payslip ?

How can you afford to lose each year a sizeable percentage of your salary (and later, pension) to a whopping 60% in medium term ?

I have a lot of work, I cannot take a day off

You will still have a lot of work until you are 67 but will be a stranger to your grandchildren.

I just can't, I am really overburdened, I have to work overtime

Do not worry, you will still be requested to work well over 40hrs a week.

My boss will frown at me if I strike

Yes and he will also frown when the new Staff Regulations enters into force because he is in the same boat.

Is it really useful to strike ? will it achieve anything ?

It is a strong signal that the Staff won't accept punitive decisions. Not striking is giving a free rein to whoever wants to harm the European Civil Service.

Réforme du Statut : c'est maintenant qu'il faut lutter pour préserver la fonction publique européenne !

Review of the Staff Regulations : Now is the time to fight for the preservation of the European Civil service !

Wednesday June, 5th : Common Front Inter-institutional Strike
